

The Cavalier OF 1940

PUBLISHED BY THE SENIOR CLASS of
OCEANA HIGH SCHOOL
Oceana, Virginia

FORWORD

Three hundred and thirty-three years ago, three tiny vessels, bearing the English Cavaliers, touched at Cape Henry, Virginia on their way to establish a colony in the new world. Their infinitesimal settlement joined others and grew until it became the United States as we know it today.

Today, only a short distance from that historic spot, we, little more than three hundred strong, are launching this annual, namesake of our Cavalier forefathers, in the hope that it may inspire those who follow us as the gallantry and courage of that little group have inspired us.

DEDICATION

To Miss Gladys Bracey and Miss Offa Lou Harris, in deepest appreciation for their patient guidance and friendly cooperation in all our endeavors during our high school life, and to Mr. R. H. Owen, who has worked so indefatigably to make this annual a success, we, the class of 1940, dedicate this first volume of the "Cavalier."

Saga of the Class of 1940

The one hundred and fourteen rats enrolled in Oceana High School in September, 1936, came from the Oceana Grade School, the Willoughby T. Cooke School of Virginia Beach, and the Princess Anne Grade School. Because of the size of the class it was necessary to have two freshman home rooms. Most of us were in Miss Bracey's and Mr. Kline's rooms, but a few were in Mr. Saunder's mixed group. Vernon Herbert served as president in Miss Bracey's home room; Bobby Barco, in Mr. Kline's room.

Even as freshman, we entered (rather noisily, perhaps) into school activities. Seven of us jumped right into the Newspaper Club; large groups entered the Literary, Dramatic, and Glee Clubs.

In September, 1937, we embarked upon happy and successful sophomore year. We were shuffled, and then divided between Miss Bracey and Mr. Upson. Miss Bracey's group chose Nell Grimes as president, and Mr. Upson's room chose Bobby Barco.

By this time we were beginning to be more active in Oceana's extra-curricular activities. The cast of the one-act play, Junior's Moustache, was composed almost entirely of sophomores. Included in the play were Phillip Rodgerson, Sara Woodhouse, and Mary Ellen Cole. The comedy was first place at William and Mary and went to Charlottesville. Vernon Herbert and Sara Woodhouse, as sports editors, and Nell Webb, as circulation manager, headed the list of thirteen members of our class who were active in the service of the Lighthouse. Mary Ellen Cole and Lucile Clark were officers of the Glee Club.

The class was active also in sports. Eleanor Woodhouse, Frieda Decker, and Sara Woodhouse, received basketball monograms; Vernon Herbert, George Wadsworth, and Garland Caffee received awards for baseball (Caffee received also a basketball award); Bobby Barco and Vivian Hodgson were recipients of football monograms.

When we became Juniors in 1938, we settled down a little. Most of us were in Miss Bracey's and Miss Harris's home rooms, although a few were included in Miss Cloud's mixed group. In Miss Harris's room Bobby Barco was chosen president, while Miss Bracey's group elected Nell Webb president. In Miss Cloud's room Bill Truit was president. During this year the class was honored by having one of its members, Vernon Herbert, elected editor-in-chief of the Lighthouse, the first time that a junior had held that position. All staff positions except two were held by juniors last year. Nell Webb, Jappy Johnson, and Nell Grimes were sent to the Student Cooperative Association Meeting at Williamsburg. Virginia Naille made a 94 on the Latin III Tournament examination.

Bobby Addenbrook became captain of our safety patrol system. We acquitted ourselves nobly in giving a successful, well-attended Junior-Senior Prom in the school gymnasium. Sending a representative to the Conference on Public Issues held by the College of William and Mary at Williamsburg was our final act as a junior class.

At long last (it had seemed to many of us that this year would never come) we found ourselves lofty seniors. Our first deed was to choose Bobby Addenbrook president of the class.

This year we really did branch out and hold the most important offices. With all newspaper staff positions, except two, held by seniors, with most of our champion girl's basketball team composed of seniors and with most of the positions in the Literary Society filled by us, we set the pace for the whole school. When the Beta Club was established at Oceana, weren't seven of the nine charter members seniors? Our senior play "Tomboy" proved a smashing success, in respect to its performance as well as its money making proclivities.

The opinion of the school, however, rates the production of this annual as the greatest single achievement of the class of 1940. We unanimously desire that it may be the first of many.

In the final round of the long struggle, we paused long enough to enjoy ourselves thoroughly at the banquet at Pine Tree Inn, tendered us by the junior class. Then we rushed headlong into examinations and came out of those just in time for the Commencement Sermon, June 2, which was delivered by Rev. J. Elwood Carroll, Greensboro, North Carolina. June 4, we assumed thick coating of dignity and solemnity which clung until we received our hard won sheepskins from Mr. E. N. MacWilliams.

Last Will and Testament of Senior Class 1940

"Vanity, Vanity, All Is Vanity"

State of Virginia,
County of Princess Anne,
School of Oceana.

We, the undignified class of nineteen hundred and forty of Oceana High School, aforesaid state, and county, being of doubtful minds and tired feet, do hereby make and proclaim our Last Will and Testament.

We, having passed (by the skin of our teeth) the first eleven milestones of our education, wish to dispose of our assets, rights, and privileges (if any) in the following way:

ARTICLE I

Section 1. To Miss Bracey and Miss Harris, our home room teachers and sponsors, we leave the memories of the good times we have had together.

Section 2. To the entire faculty we leave our sympathy (using ourselves for examples) for the "Lamebrains" that they are to have in the future.

ARTICLE II

Section 1. To the incoming Senior Class we leave the Senior privileges (we hope they find more than we did—if they find any, it will be more).

We also bestow upon them the right to publish the "Cavalier" for 1941.

Section 2. To certain members of the crop of Seniors for 1941 we bequeath the following valuable assets or peculiarities:

The brilliant (?) minds of Virginia Naille and Betty Flynn to Unadell Horton, Marjorie Davis, Celia Bass, and the rest of the girls that need a portion.

Helen Rodgers ability to sing to Vivian Capps.
Frieda Dekker and Eleanor Woodhouse's position on the basketball team to Shirley Malbon and Jane Philhower.

David Roberts and Bernard Smith's height to Harold Smithson and Paul Whesdos.

Ralph Midgett's personality to Edwin Lindsey and Willard Ashburn.

Betty Scott's position in the hall at lunch period to Geraldine Farrar and Una Dell Horton.

Sara Woodhouse's acting ability to Geneva Darden.

Sherron Crockett's weight to Annette Mason and Thelma Allen.

Genevieve McClanan's talkativeness to Anne Falconer, Agnes Marshall, and Junior Whitehurst.

Durwood Phelp's bashfulness to Ivan Osborn, Hardy Cole, and the rest of the Junior boys.

Jappy Johnson's beautiful and thrilling laugh (commonly known as giggles) to Dent Cole.

Mary Ellen Cole's ability to dance to Frances Forsman.

Phillip Rodgerson's personality to any dope who wants it.

Eileen Boush's and Nell Webb's carefree ways to Marguerite Garrett.

Bobby Addenbrook's friendliness to Bob Shirey.

Sonny Booker's way with the girls to Mac Davis.

Jerry Jarvis' cynical remarks to Dick Carrall and Elkan Lachman.

Thomas Helvin's ability to sleep in class unnoticed to Leon Dudley, Floyd Deary, and Hugh McTernan.

Gilbert Lawrence's baritone voice to Bob White and Edward Morrisette.

Betty Dodson's figure to Dot Shirey and Virginia Williams.

Kaleoppe Ketsule's name to Dot Belton.

Katherine Flanagan's meekness to Eliza Nie-man.

Annie B. Croonenbergh's poise to Lucille Barnes and Estelle Carroll.

Steve Gresham's temper to Robert Lachman.

Jack Malbon's quietness to Garnet Riley.

Herman Harris's salesmanship to George Binder.

George Blair's "stickability" to Mac Davis.

Bradie Lee's color schemes to Anne Jackson.

The dignity of the Senior Class as expressed in Lucille Clark, Marie Scott, Majorie Malbon, Isabel Toler and Nell Grimes to all the girls of the Junior Class.

We leave to all the Junior boys:

Bobby Austin's—grin.

Irving Brother's—sarcasm.

Garland Caffee's—athletic ability.

Allen Tyler's—good humor.

George Wadsworth's—position on the basketball team.

To the Junior girls we leave Mildred Sanderlin's—artistic ability.

Section 3. To the smart Sophomores we bestow our uncanny ability to make up excuses and get out of work.

Section 4. We bequeath to the still bewildered Freshmen the art of chewing gum in classes unnoticed (they will need it when they are Seniors in Mr. Owen's Civic class).

Section 5. To the whole school we gladly leave the bell which rings every morning, Monday through Friday, at the fatal hour of 8:50.

ARTICLE III

Any other will or testament made by us in our sound minds is declared void.

In witness hereof we, the Senior Class, do set our hand and seal to this will on this most dramatic twenty-fourth day of May, in the year of our Lord, one thousand nine hundred and forty.

Senior Class (Seal).

Phillip E. Rodgerson (Executor).

Class Prophecy

As the curtain falls on our high school life, our thoughts turn to the future. Because of this, the senior class, in a body visited Madame Badoura, a famous crystal gazer, who, in an aura of oriental mysticism, made the following prophecies:

I, Madame Badoura, see several figures taking form in the clouded future. Behold! I see Bobby Addenbrooke seated before a revolving table at the Waldorf-Astoria, an expert judge of the culinary arts, while in the Blue Room, Marjorie (Malbon) and her Magic Violin enralls her audience with the delicate air of some Neopolitan love song. Over in the corner, surrounded by beautiful ladies, sits Jerry Jarvis whose cynical smile and witty conversation attract all the beauties of Fifth Avenue as well as Broadway. And, who are those two alone over there in the corner, sipping their wine and dreaming of some far away land, but Bobby Roberts and Virginia Naille, now literary critics on the New York Times.

How soon the scene changes! Now I see the interior of Carnegie Hall, thronged with world celebrities: Irving Brothers and Ralph Midgett, famed horse breeders; Allen Tyler, producer of "Tyler Tease," this year's Broadway hit; Mildred Sanderlin well-known commercial artist; Gilbert Lawrence, widely publicized best dressed man; Nell Webb, whose elopement with Prince Ali-Ben-Barrel-Head rivals the abdication of King Edward, VIII ten years ago. This glittering audience has assembled to hear Miss Betty Flynn perform Padrewski's Minuet in G. Above the music, we hear Genevieve McClannan making slurring remarks to her tophatted escort; while Senator Herman R. Harris feasts his eyes upon the delicate loveliness of Mrs. Harris (the former Helen Rodgers).

Again the figures fade and go their way, while others come to take the fore. We see Jack Malbon, chauffeur for the oil magnate, George Wadsworth, busily talking to Durwood Phelps, expert mechanic. Strolling along and talking loud enough to be easily understood, we hear Stevie Gresham, dietician for Blair Expeditions, Inc., discussing with Explorer Blair plans for the second expedition to the Albategnius crater on the moon.

Wait! The ball is clouded! As the misty veil lifts, we are gazing on the sunny shores of California. Underneath a coat of tan (from a jar) we make out the massive physique and handsome features of our Bobby Austin, dutifully watching the bathing beauties, and getting paid for it, because he is captain of the Lifeguard. Clustered about him are such shapely mermaids as Jappy Johnson, Betty Dodson, Isabel Toler, Eileen Boush, and Freida Dekker. Near by the thriving metropolis of Hollywood lies shimmering in the glaring sun. On lot 13 of M. G. M.'s studios Charles Rogers, famous character actor during a short rest is discussing plans for his newest picture with Director T. K. Helvin. We leave the studios to board a transcontinental plane at the Los Angeles Airport. As we enter the plane, we are greeted by the familiar, cheerful countenance of Betty Sue Scott, Chief Stewardess, who informs us that another old schoolmate, Sara Woodhouse, one of the first women to hold such a position, is at the controls. Immediately after the take-off, Miss Scott supplies us with newspapers. We are confronted with these headlines:

Premier Postponed—M. E. Cole, blues singing star, develops a sudden case of laryngitis.

Caffee Sets New Record for Indoor Mile.

Glancing through the paper we make the following notations:

The California schools have adopted the newest edition of Croonenbergh's Civics Book for Senior High Schools.

Bernard Smith has received an award from the United States Government in recognition of his development of a superior type of corn.

Nell Grimes has just won the Eastern Olympic Tryouts.

Eleanor Woodhouse has been appointed Secretary of Interior.

Early next morning, our plane arrives at the Miami, Florida Airport. A taxi driven by Sonny Booker takes us to a leading hotel. Much to our surprise, we meet our old friend, Lucile Clark, who is the manager. Also staying at the hotel, we are delighted to find Marion Brothers on another lecture tour. Before leaving the resort city, we "get religion" and attend the evangelistic services of Rev. P. E. Rodgerson, D. D., nationally known as Billy Sunday, II. On the remainder of our trip, we are welcomed into the happy households of Marie Scott, Katherine Flanagan, Kaleoppe Ketsules, Bradie Lee, and Sherron Crockett.

When we had seen the futures of all our fellow seniors, we thanked Madame Badoura kindly and left, feeling that we knew no more than on our entrance.

Amen.
